Help Wanted

Trident Booksellers & Cafe:

Full-time and Part-time Bookseller
Positions Available

After experiencing a fire and undergoing an extensive renovation and remodel, we're back! The Trident is scheduled to reopen in August and we are looking to fill a variety of new positions for our growing team.

Trident is searching for people interested with books and working in a quirky environment. If you're someone who enjoys talking about books, reading the latest titles, and wants to help customers find their next great read, then Trident is the place for you! Minorities are strongly encouraged to apply.

A Newbury Street staple for 34 years, our fast-paced, high energy restaurant has three dining rooms, a bar with wine and beer by the bottle and on tap and a busy and growing public and private events schedule. We offer Free Wi-Fi and we're the last independent bookstore in Boston Proper. Be sure to check out our website at www.TridentBooksCafe.com before applying, and tell us why you'd like to join our team.

To apply for bookseller positions go to http://tridentbookscafe.com/about_us.html to download our application. Resumes can be attached, but are not necessary. Email your completed application to Clarissa at bookemployment@tridentbookscafe.com.

MIT Press Bookstore: Part-time Bookseller (21 hours)

MIT Press Bookstore is looking for a book-loving, customer- and community-oriented bookseller, who is adaptable and prepared to be involved in many aspects of running a bookstore, to join a small, dynamic team. The job needs someone who can work weekends. MIT Press Bookstore sells books from the MIT Press and from a wide range of mostly scholarly and academic publishers, and we are a resource for the communities of MIT and Cambridge.

The bookseller role entails sales, merchandising, and clerical duties and there is an expectation that the successful candidate will build their knowledge of MIT Press books and publishing disciplines; using a POS system; ordering, shipping, and receiving inventory; stocking and merchandising shelves, providing general clerical support; and representing the bookstore at off-site events.
